For myself, I declare boldly, 6 from the bottom of my heart, that if I were called to write something which was to be invested with infallible authority, I should do my best to write that my words should include the widest range of meaning, and should not be confined to one line alone, exclusion of all others, even of those which should be in consistent with my own. For from my O God, in the Trinity, to suppose that to speak a Word which did not arise from Thy grace even were a favor! Yet, he has no words in his heart, when he knows that words, all that he can ever discover of the truth—every truth which has been written at Bethel, or which appears at all, but which nevertheless may yet be discovered in them.
